Communist doctrines may have been disavowed by the textile strikers on trial for murder at Charlotte, N. C., but one of their original number has been named a delegate to the twelfth anniversary celebration of the Workers and Farmers' Revolution in Russia. He is Russell Knight, above, who first was held on charges of taking part in the "mob killing" of Police Chief O. F. Aderholt of Gastonia and later released. He will represent the Southern Textile Workers' Conference at the Soviet celebration.

Miller County Case Is Affirmed

Youth Must Serve Five Years for Assaulting Own Brother

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Allen Martin, Miller county youth, must serve five years with intent to kill his brother, John, the Supreme Court announced today in affirming the sentence imposed by the lower court in which the question of proficiency of one as a pistol shot should determine the intent to kill was raised.

The defense made much of a ruling of the court refusing to permit a witness to testify when it developed he would have sworn the defendant was an expert pistol shot and could have killed his brother had he so intended. The court held that even an expert shot under excitement was not an expert.

The appeal of W. H. Howell from a verdict of death imposed by a Crawford circuit court jury was submitted to the supreme court today after several delays. Howell was convicted of killing Jim Nicholson, aged inmate of the Crawford county infirmary. He was indicted but not tried for the killing of Superintendent Cliff Deffenbaugh and his wife at the institution at the time of Nicholson's murder.

Howell, past 60, was saved from death last May by an appeal but in the meantime illness of his attorney has prevented the perfecting of the appeal.

Loyalty Banquet Committees Are Actively On Job

Event for Night of October 29 To Be Most Ambitious Yet Held.

KIWANIS SPONSORS

Local Civic Organization In Charge of Community Building Meet.

John P. Cox, president of Hope Kiwanis club which sponsors the third loyalty banquet to be held here in recent months, announces today that he is receiving most encouraging reports from the various committees appointed and that indications point to the forthcoming banquet as one of the best of the many community-building gatherings planned here.

"Key" farmers from over the trade territory around Hope, are evincing an interest in the gathering, realizing their benefit to the community. Without exception they are accepting the invitations extended them, expressing appreciation at being given a chance to aid in the task of more fully developing this portion of Arkansas.

Through these banquets and other community moves Hope and her trade territory are co-ordinating their effort, working together on any project until it is fairly completed and then getting unitedly behind some other development to its logical limit of the country, in many varied lines, as the motive of these who realize the wealth of opportunities available here.

Active Legion Worker Is Visiting In City

Pete Mayne, active in Legion matters for the past decade and an old-time friend of Star's city editor, blew in Saturday night for a visit, expecting to stick around a day or so to get a line on South Arkansas.

It had been some three-four years since the news writer and Mayne had forgathered—which gathering, if you must know, was some steen hundred miles west of Watermelon Land, down where the tortillas and frijoles grow—where a man is a candidate for president one day and a corpse the next.

Mayne was one of the executive committee of the Legion to whom was assigned the task of putting on the convention in San Antonio last year, coming out of the struggle without any wound stripes or without once having gone A. W. O. L.

On Initial Flight Monster Plane Has 169 Passengers

Huge Plane Aloft for Hour and Sets New Record

HAS TWELVE MOTORS

Huge Flying Boat Will Be Used In Atlantic Flight To Test Out

ALTERNHEIM, Switzerland, Oct. 21.—(AP)—The D. O-X, the twelve-engine huge flying boat which was launched here last July today made an amazing one hour flight with a human load of 60 passengers, the first time in the history of aviation that so many persons have been carried into the air by any conveyance.

The giant Dornier plane off at 11:15 and ended just one hour later. The machine flew over Lake Constance, her motors working faultlessly and landed her 61-ton load at 12:15 p. m., without a hitch.

The D. O-X carried 159 passengers and a crew of ten. She had made several test flights previously, but this was the first time so great a load was attempted to be carried aloft.

Built in Secrecy
The flying boat which may be used in a trans-Atlantic crossing to test her capacities was built with the greatest secrecy. She was designed to carry 40 passengers normally but has quarters for 100 if necessary. Her 2 engines can develop a total of more than 6,000 horsepower and each of the engines can be treated individually without affecting its neighbors.

Reed Talked As Missouri Governor

State Dry Leader Urges Former Senator To Make Race

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Former United States Senator James A. Reed was urged today by State Senator A. L. McCawley, auditor of Missouri's "bone dry" law and consistent prohibitionist through his public career, McCawley placed varty head above personal principles.

"I am convinced that Senator Reed is the one party leader in Missouri who could be elected governor and carry the rest of the state ticket to victory," McCawley said. "If he would make the necessary personal sacrifice that such a race would mean to him, I would give my best efforts to aid him in securing the nomination and election."

"In 1932, we will have to elect not only a governor and a United States senator but a full state ticket, including three judges of the State Supreme Court. The future of the Democratic party in Missouri hinges largely, in my judgment, on the result of that election. Behind Senator Reed as its leader the party could and would make a great fight for restoration of power in state government."

"I haven't the slightest idea that Senator Reed would entertain a suggestion that he stand for the gubernatorial nomination. It would be a great day, though, for Missouri Democrats if he would consent to lead them out of the wilderness."

President and Party In Detroit

Greeted By Edison and Ford At Quaint Old Railway Station

DETROIT, October 21. (AP)—Coming to join in a tribute to Thomas A. Edison on the 50th anniversary of the perfection of the incandescent light, President Hoover arrived at Dearborn, the Henry Ford estate near here, at 9:28 this morning. A drizzle of rain which began before dawn continued.

At Dearborn the President and party were transferred from the capitol special to a train of the style of 1879, drawn by a wood-burning locomotive. Aboard the train the party was taken to the historical village to be greeted at a quaint old railroad station by the Henry Ford and Mr. Edison and their parties.

Just Now He's Superstitious

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Though not superstitious by nature, Starter John Donovan of the Boston Elevated Railway Company is going to look into this matter of the Number 13, ladders and the like.

Upon entering Neponset station recently, trolley car 4213 which Donovan was operating, struck and upset a ladder on which a painter was working.

The painter was unhurt, but a gallon pail of white paint was hurled through a car window, daubing Donovan from head to foot.

Today's trial, being the first of 15 indictments lodged against the Public-Saenger theatre by District Attorney Steve Carrigan, was in the nature of a test case.

It was announced there would be no appeal, but it was doubtful whether today's court decision would serve to halt the further showing of Sunday motion pictures.

Today's action superseded a previous action begun in the justice courts at Hope, where Mr. Eaves, as manager for Public-Saenger, was fined several weeks ago. Since the justice courts are not permitted to pass on an interpretation of the law, it was understood that today's trial represented the chief action brought by the district attorney and the state.

It was announced there would be no appeal, but it was doubtful whether today's court decision would serve to halt the further showing of Sunday motion pictures.

Judge Instructs Verdict, Throwing Out the Defense

Contention That Changed Conditions Alter Law, Is Invalid.

LEGION ALSO LOSES

Judge Rules On Basis of Supreme Court Decisions.

The Saenger-Public theatre of Hope was this morning found guilty of violating the Sunday law of Arkansas, on a directed verdict in Hempstead county circuit court at Washington.

The verdict, which was ordered by Special Judge W. H. Arnold, of Texarkana, carries with it a fine of $1 and costs—the maximum penalty under the state law.

Defense Arguments
The defense, represented by attorneys W. S. Atkins and Luke Monroe, contended that the Arkansas Sabbath law was not religious in its nature but was for the moral and economic welfare of the state, and changing conditions warranted a new interpretation of the law. It was also claimed by the defense that the operation of Sunday picture shows under the auspices of the American Legion, a benevolent society, provided exemption from the law. Judge Arnold held that the Arkansas Supreme Court had ruled against both these defenses.

Manager Jack Eaves, of the Saenger, was placed on the stand and examined at length by District Attorney Steve Carrigan. Under cross-examination the defense brought out its argument that Sunday motion pictures were of moral and economic value, and that their showing under the auspices of the Legion amounted to a contribution to a charitable public institution.

Over at 10:30 Judge Arnold closed the case with an instructed verdict—and the trial was over. Court had been called for 8 o'clock, and by 10:30 the verdict was reached and the crowded courtroom quickly cleared.

Prohibition Cases Fill U. S. Dockets

Prosecutions Increase Past Year but Convictions Are Fewer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Prohibition complaints monopolized almost two thirds of the criminal docket in federal district courts during the fiscal year ended June 30, but while the number of cases mounted, convictions lagged behind.

Statistics made public today by the Department of Justice showed a total of 110,655 civil and criminal cases, of which 86,448 were criminal. There were 56,786 prohibition cases, 1,000 more than the previous year.

There were 47,000 convictions, 1,700 fewer than the year before, but the department said that there was a slight increase in the amount collected in fines. The total amount for the last year was $7,476,300, $173,000 more than the preceding year.

The largest number of cases instituted in the Southern District of New York, where there were 7,816. Next came the Eastern District of Kentucky with 2,945, the Northern District of New York with 2,295, and the District of Columbia, 1,661.

The smallest number of cases in any district outside of Alaska and Porto Rico were in the states of Kansas, North Dakota, Vermont and Utah. Kansas, however, with 28 cases, exactly doubled

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The Innocent Cheat

By Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL - POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Helen Page feels indebted to and in love with her guardian, Leonard. The latter changes his plans for her future after meeting a dying beggar, Mellin, and tells the girl she is heiress of a millionaire named Cunningham. Brent takes her to the lonely old man and offers proofs which Cunningham accepts, as he had been searching for his dead daughter's child for years.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva Ennis and her brother Robert, who falls in love with her. Brent becomes jealous of Bob and plots to win Helen quickly, especially after finding another locket like the one he had taken from Nellin to prove Helen the heiress. Hearing that a sudden shock would kill Cunningham, Brent slyly administers the shock, and the servants find the old man dead in bed. Then, by clever acting and appeal to her loyalty, Brent wins Helen's promise to marry him.

Later, she and Bob discover their true love for each other and he is angry when she tells him she cannot break her engagement though she loves him. Bob flirts with Shallimar Morris, not knowing that Helen has tried to break with Brent after finding him indulging in a love affair with another woman. But he had refused to release her and had made dire threats if she tried to throw him over.

Eva realizes that Helen is unhappy, but resents her treatment of Bob which has driven him to Shallimar. But Eva is worried, too, for Brent is now avoiding her after having made ardent love to her secretly. She recalls Bob and he laughs at her, saying that Helen is engaged to Brent. Eva collapses and admits that Brent has been making love to her. Bob goes to tell Helen the kind of cad she is engaged to, and while he is there an urgent call comes from his mother. They rush over just in time to prevent Eva from taking poison in a fit of hysteria. Helen tries to tell her what a cad Brent is, but she insists that she must see him. Helen decides to see him first and phones for him to come up.

CHAPTER XLVII

Brent dressed leisurely and lingered over his breakfast, taking a third cup of the crystal clear coffee his maid had prepared for him—adding a tiny pinch of salt in place of sugar or cream. Its steaming fragrance, mingled with the smoke from his Turkish cigarette, filled him with a sense of well being that brought the look of a lately fed jungle beast into his eyes.

His satanic smile played over his lips now and then as certain pleasing thoughts came to him. Helen must be stewing over his delay. Let her. The more upset she was the better for him. Carmel had promised to be good, being clever enough to know the limit of all things.

Eva was a mouse. No trouble there. That girl Shallimar—well, if she hadn't landed Bob Ennis it didn't matter. She'd soon be sent packing—he'd see to that. Not have her hanging around to give Ennis an excuse to call. The young puppy might have the nerve even with the door closed in his face at Helen's orders.

But what did it matter? What did anything matter? Brent drank deep from the cup, drew in a long breath of smoke and steeped himself in his satisfaction.

Helen was his. He could take her when he wished. She was utterly helpless.

Finally he glanced at a small clock on his desk, arose, stretched himself agreeably and went to change his dressing gown for his street coat.

His Japanese, ever watchful, came in to help him. Brent told him to telephone for his car.

The garage was just around the corner, a convenience for which those who hired space in it were required to pay heavily. The car was brought to the door of Brent's apartment house within 10 minutes and he went down to take the wheel, thoroughly convinced that the ultimate success of his scheming was at hand.

Fears he had entertained formerly that Helen would refuse the new role he would offer her had subsided. No one could be so mad, he believed.

Give up millions? Face poverty—a girl who had been carefully protected all her life? Yes, perhaps, he admitted, but the publicity? Could she stand up to all that exposure would mean to her? He thought not.

Not caring for slow driving, he made good time to Yonkers. Helen was waiting for him. She ran to open the door herself, having lost much of her self control while waiting for him in nervous anxiety.

He attempted to take her hand for a kiss in greeting but she drew it angrily away from him and turned to lead the way to the living room.

Brent followed without a word. She must be the first to speak—it suited his purpose to have it so.

In the privacy of the vast room she whirled upon him and her words came like the lash of a whip.

"I've heard about you and Eva."

Brent stiffened slightly, the only outward sign that she had disturbed his poise. One eyebrow went up inquiringly, but he remained silent.

"Well, what do you mean to do about it?" Helen pursued.

"Do?" Brent repeated blankly.

"Are you thinking of marrying her?" Helen asked tensely.

"My dear girl!" Brent was amused.

"I see," Helen said icily. "I am glad to know that you have no such impossible intention."

She went on, her eyes fairly burning with scorn for him.

"You need not have worried," Brent said hastily. "I shall marry no one but you, Helen."

For a moment Helen was too furious to speak. Then: "You are mistaken," she said, using all her will to say it calmly, "if you expect to marry me."

"Because of Eva?" Brent taunted her. "My word, you are jealous, aren't you?"

"I thought you at least too intelligent to be facetious at a time like this," Helen promptly returned.

"Why at a time like this?" he inquired blandly.

Helen came close to losing her temper completely. "Don't you know that you've simply broken Eva's heart?" she cried.

"Nonsense."

"Some day I'm certain she will think so too," Helen agreed; "but for the present she imagines herself in love with you. She wants to see you. That is why I have sent for you . . ."

"She isn't here?" Brent asked, with a touch of consternation.

"No she isn't," Helen relieved him. "She doesn't know how futile it would be to make an appeal to you for any kind of decent treatment—but I know, and I wish to spare her further disillusionment."

"Yes?" Brent smiled over her opinion of him, thinking of what she was yet to learn. "How do you propose to do that?"

"I want your promise never to see her again. No fate could be worse for her than to go on with you."

"Thanks," he answered dryly. "I'm willing to make that promise. The kid's a damned nuisance, but don't think you're dictating to me, my dear. I simply find it convenient to comply with your wishes in the matter."

"But should you change your mind," Helen began warningly, "let me tell you that her brother will thrash you within an inch of your life—and maybe he won't stop there."

"An inch to live," Brent exclaimed. "Sounds like a popular questionnaire." "What would you do if you had but an inch to live?"

"Just, if you like," Helen told him: "But you can't go forever tramping on other people without some day being trampled on in turn."

Brent smiled broadly. "What a dear little lecturer you are," he said enthusiastically. "You ought always to be in a temper, Helen. You literally blaze."

"I mean what I say," Helen cautioned him.

Brent sobered. "Where does young Ennis come in?" he shot at her suddenly.

Helen's head reared haughtily. "I am going to marry him," she stated.

"You are going to marry me," he retorted snarlingly.

Helen answered rather quietly, considering how his words fired her anger.

"I promised to tell you when I made a decision like this," she said. "well, you may persist in taking a ridiculous attitude if you choose, but I am going to marry Robert Ennis."

They had been standing. Brent now waved toward a chair. "Sit down," he said and seated himself on another.

"This is going to take time," he warned, as Helen disdained to comply.

"There really isn't anything more to be said," she hinted.

"There is a great deal, and it will take some time," he differed. "It won't be pleasant either—for you. You'd better sit down, my dear."

Helen glanced at her wrist-watch. "I am taking Miss Morris to the station in a few minutes," she told him. "Please say what you have to say as quickly as possible."

"I'll advise you to make other arrangements for getting her there," Brent remarked. "You do not take me seriously, I see, but you will shortly, and I predict that you will not be in a mood to drive out when this interview is over."

Helen refused to be frightened. "Very well," Brent began as she stood waiting. His practice of politeness compelled him to rise and stand also. "You may as well have it straight from the shoulder. Here it is: You will never marry Ennis."

Helen smiled disdainfully. "You won't have the nerve to tell him that you're a criminal," Brent went on: "and if you marry him without telling him I'll expose you."

Helen's eyes were wide with mixed emotions, chiefly astonishment and disbelief but there was fear lurking in them as well. Fear that Brent was evil enough to have found some way to wreck her happiness, however innocent of any wrong she herself might be.

She made a wordless sound of protest and shrank back from his cold, threatening approach.

"What have you to say to that?" he demanded.

Helen rallied her courage. "Only that you are a contemptible coward," she cried, "and utterly insane."

"Am I?" Brent mocked her. "Possibly, but not too insane to have put you in the Nellin girl's place—to have won an immense fortune for you—and to have you just where I want you."

Helen was now completely confused, quite unable to follow him. He saw that she would not know where to begin to ask the questions that were seething in her mind and decided to tell her everything of her story from the start.

Helen listened helplessly. It was so appalling, so shocking, to hear the dead parents she had revered revealed as crooks, to learn that Brent himself was even worse than she had thought him—she could do nothing but stare glassily at him while her world fell about her head.

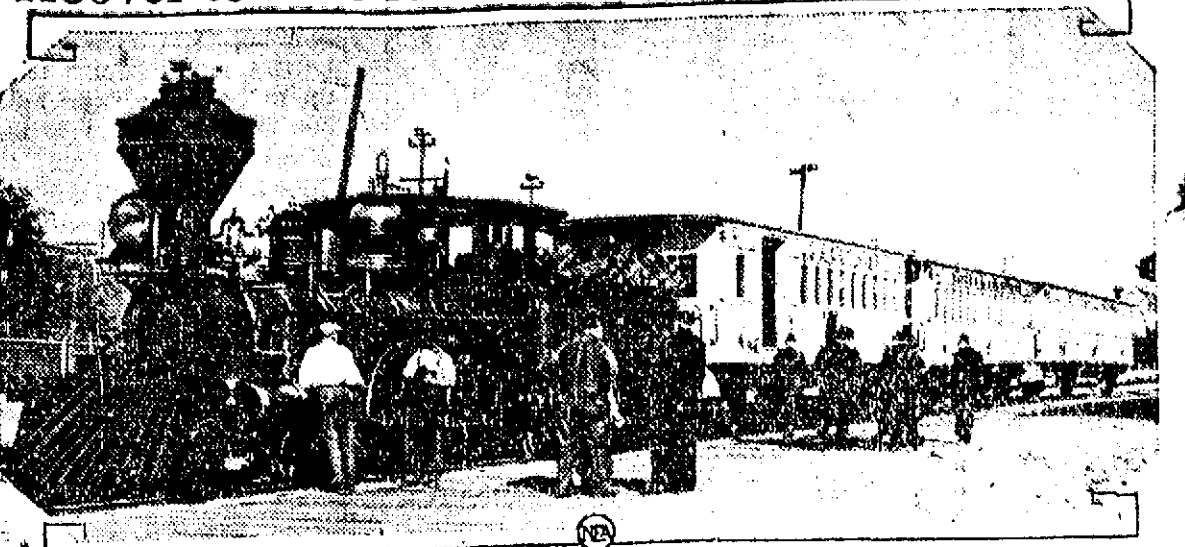

He told her the whole truth—how he had stumbled upon the facts of the Cunningham case—how he had conceived the idea of imposing her upon the aged man as his granddaughter—and what it meant to him.

"And now you know why you can't refuse to marry me," he ended.

Helen's lips opened stiffly—her words came with great difficulty. "But you . . . you are the criminal," she cried hoarsely.

Brent's tenseness slackened, his tigerishness left him, and he became

Women Gain in Golf

Women provided the year's biggest golf stories, a glance at the records of major tournaments of the 1929 season reveals. Furthermore analysis of these records indicates that women are progressing at a much faster pace than men, much the same as they have done in many other sports.

A dozen years ago, a card of 86 by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd in the National Championship won her medal honors by several strokes to spare. She was the only player to crack 90 in the qualifying round. The recent National tournament at Oakland Hills saw 82 women qualify in the championship fight, with scores ranging from 79, made by Helen Hicks and Virginia Van Wite, to 88, Mrs. O. S. Hill shot a brilliant 77, which included six birdies on the last nine, to gain medalist honors in the Women's Western at Mayfield in August.

Hicks Heroism

One of the season's most heroic acts was the manner in which Helen Hicks stroked a 23 coming in at Hamilton, to defeat Glenna Collet on the twentieth green in the finals of the Canadian women's championship. Glenna did a notable bit of golfing when she shot 34 against Joyce Wethered at St.

Pickles

Early fall is the time to stock the pantry shelf with the mixed pickles and relishes that give the variety to the winter menu of dried vegetables. Pickles have very little food value but they act as an aid to digestion which is a big factor and makes them worth while.

There is scarcely a garden that does not at this time of year have something suitable for making pickles, such as, tomatoes both ripe and green, peppers, cabbage, and onions. There are many pickles and relishes that can be made from Andrews.

But what have the men been doing this golf season?
The professionals were off their game, it would seem. There was the trouncing they received from the British in the Ryder Cup matches. Walter Hagan provided the only solace for them when he captured the British Open.

Champions Fuzzle
Horton Smith, Johnny Farrell, Tommy Armour and Leo Diegel failed to excite enthusiasm. Smith came back to earth after his sensational play during the winter season, while Farrell, the 1928 champ, was wrong all year. Diegel and Armour loafed in their own sections and were not seen to display any outstanding performances.

Even Bobby Jones lost the amateur championship, and when he does that something is wrong. When Bobby lost to Johnny Goodman in an early match of the amateur tournament at Pebble Beach, the bottom seemed to drop right out of the whole affair. Jimmy Johnston won it, but what concerned the golf public more was the fact that Bobby Jones lost it.

True, Jones took the National Open in the play-off with Al Espinosa, but the latter suffered a tragic collapse and the play-off was a "bust."

Leavelle Signs Hall and Mitchell for Thursday Night's Main Event

Card Will Present To Flashy Boxers, Each Having A Following In Local Circles—"The Black Peril" In the Semi-Final.

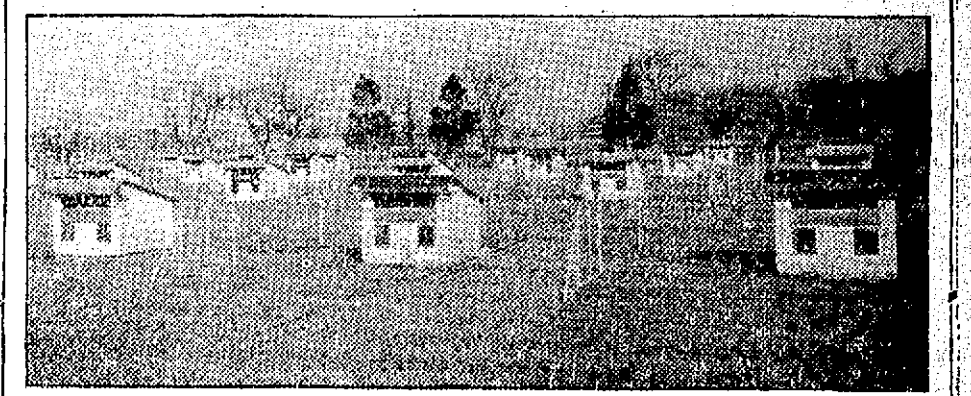

When Johnny Hall and Hi Mitchell signed articles agreeing to step over the ten round route here next Thursday night, promoter Tex Leavelle and his assistant, Sammy Sobie, leaned back and drew a sigh of relief, confident they had succeeded in slating one show which fans here desired to see above all others.

Repeated efforts to get these two boys together has failed but Leavelle and Sobie went after them with the result fans next Thursday have opportunity to witness two of the fastest boys in their weight class in this section in action.

Hall, the Missouri Pacific Black flash from Little Rock, has boxed here several times and is conceded to be class, Mitchell, who hails from Louisiana, has shown here but once but created a decidedly favorable impression by his work. Both men report they are in condition and promise to go in there fighting.

Perry Briggs, local negro, is on for the semi-final with a boy Mitchell is bringing up from Alexandria with him and this event, too, promises to be worth while.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

You have seen the play of Hack 'n' Mack, the University of Tennessee's great backfield pair, but you can realize how the team could roll up such an impressive record as 23 victories in a row.

Hack is Buddy Hackman and Mack is Eugene McEver. But all through the south they are Hack 'n' Mack, and as far as telling which is the better half-back, that just can't be done. Major Bob Neyland, at least, coach of the Vols, refuses to commit himself on that point.

They are alike as far as playing ability is concerned. They duplicate one another's feats on the gridiron. But they are, to use Major Neyland's words, "as totally different as any two men on earth."

"There's McEver," says the major, "he's dark and his face is set. His legs are short and his chin determined. There's Hackman, smiling, blond, built like an antelope, and apparently easygoing."

"Both of them have the highest spirit imaginable. Neither has the slightest bit of the prima donna about him. That counts for a lot."

In the game last year with Alabama, Mack ran back a kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown, the score that beat the Crimson Tide, 15 to 13. And Hackman ran back a kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown in the victory over Washington and Lee.

Mack doesn't do anything Hack can't do. They're just Hack 'n' Mack, and they win the games together.

Man Finds Relief From Constipation Troubles by Taking Black-Draught.

Seneca, S. O.—"I am forty-four years old, and I might say," relates Mr. W. A. Bruce of this city, "that I have taken Black-Draught, at intervals, all my life."

"I remember that, when just a small child, my mother made tea from Black-Draught and gave it to me."

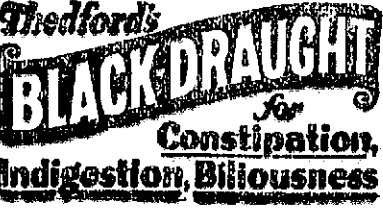

"As I grew up, when I needed a medicine for biliousness, or for constipation, I would take Black-Draught."

"A few years back, I noticed that if I took the least cold, and my stomach was out of order, I would have very severe headache. The cold seemed to settle there. My eyes would burn, and I would suffer a good bit of pain. I took Black-Draught for this, and I do not have that trouble now."

"I found, too, that there was no use suffering from constipation, as I once did. Black-Draught relieved me, and I am feeling fine, now."

"I recommend Black-Draught to others, and have had them to tell me how much good it did them."

Money Is Unmoral

Editorial Opinion Memphis Commercial Appeal

Men who grow wheat and corn and cotton have wondered why it was frequently most difficult and sometimes impossible for them to secure financial accommodation in producing what is as necessary for the banker as for anyone else, while those who produce nothing in markets and among dealers that never even see what is traded in can get all they want in the way of money. The explanation is not so difficult. Feeding and clothing the world is a slow and not always profitable undertaking. It does not always permit the dollars used in its pursuit to multiply quickly and in great abundance. On the other hand there is hasty and plentiful profit derivable through dealing in future possibilities rather than in present realities.

Money, in its own process of reproduction, is neither moral nor social minded. It will neglect the actual bringing into being of the things its possessors must have to live. In order to minister to some theoretical viewpoint concerning the processes by which life is continued. It may sound paradoxical, but it is none the less true, that the financing of accidentals and chance is safer than the financing of necessity and what has to be certain. So the banks of the nation have the ancient justification of self-preservation.

But, at the moment there is a new development in banking that will be equally understandable, if not so readily justifiable. The other day federal prohibition officers raided a group of houses along the Atlantic seaboard. They were the storage places of the biggest rum running and bootlegging organization ever yet developed. This law defying organization was so bold in its disregard of the law that it maintained an illegal wireless station through which it directed its fleet of rum ships. Speed boats and land transporting forces. On the face of things, it was a concern of many millions of dollars.

That such an organization frequently needed large sums of money to carry on its work was equally obvious. So an investigation has determined that this rum running and bootlegging outfit was supplied with big loans by a half dozen or more banks in the territory wherein it operated. Now it is bad enough that big financial institutions should assist even indirectly in tramping upon the constitution. But worse than that is the charge by federal prohibition agents that certain members of these or similar institutions were the backers of this open and brazen defiance to the nation's basic charter.

Necessarily in this case also the returns to the financial backers and supporters of the avowedly lawless organization were sure and plentiful, much more certain and abundant than would be the backing of some legitimate enterprise. But the plea of self-preservation can not be admitted. The work of defying the law and the constitution that any banker or man of wealth may have engaged in was but a contribution to anarchy, and anarchy would most certainly destroy its highly placed supporters if it should ever take hold of the country.

So the lure of profit in such a case is but the lure to ruin. Money can be either immoral or non-moral; it can even be non-social and still be beneficial and profitable to itself. But it can not be lawless and serve even its own selfish ends with any hope of success in the long run. There should be a thorough investigation and a stern accounting on the facts of this case. At least money can be made lawful and law abiding.

Fighters—Large and Small

On Collectors of "Junk"

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 21.—Joseph Caspar and Fred Behrendt, admitted to Judge J. C. Michael in district court that they needed some spending money.

So they went about getting it in an honest way—collecting junk.

Police said they collected $6,000 worth of zinc pipes from the organ of Pilgrim's Baptist church, melted up the metal and sold it to a junk dealer. The junk dealer said he paid $4.55 for the metal.

Judge Michael sentenced Caspar and Behrendt to from two to 10 years in the state penitentiary.

to a novel method of announcing the marriage of Miss Velma M. Murphy and Clarence Wampler.

Proceeding with a wedding ceremony before an assemblage of guests, the minister halted when he came to the part when objectors to the union are asked to speak.

"I'm sorry, I cannot marry these two as I know this young woman has a husband, now living, from whom she has not yet been divorced."

Gas Boon To Zeppelin
But Plagues Cannery

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Hydrogen, the gas that buoyed the Graf Zeppelin on its trips, is an unwanted guest in peach canneries.

Sulphur, used to control brown-rot fungus on peaches, has been found by two scientists of the bureau of plant industry to be responsible for "flippers" and "swells"—names applied to distended cans.

Swelling is only a problem when peaches for canning have ripened rapidly and are too soft to be peeled in the regular machines.

The scientists, C. W. Colpepper and H. H. Moon, found that hydrogen sulphide, the same substance that gives spoiled eggs their odor, was also formed and that sulphur, in the presence of certain juices, would attack the metallic cans. No preventive measure has been devised.

You Remember
Goliath

Don't overlook the smaller advertisements in this paper. Look them over. The message which an advertisement conveys is vastly more important than the mere size of the space it fills. Some of the biggest values are often described in type no larger than ordinary news-print.

The safest method is to read all the advertisements, large and small. Experience proves that it is time well spent. The more time you spend in preparation for shopping, the less actual time you will have to be on your feet in the stores.

Read the advertisements in this paper and you will know in advance just what to buy, where to buy it, and how much you will have to pay for it. You will conserve your own energy and that of the salespeople whose job it is to wait upon you. Presshopping in the advertising columns is simply common sense.

If you have been skipping the little advertisements in this paper, decide now that you will give them a hearing after this. It will be as much to your advantage as it will be to the advantage of the merchant or manufacturer whose name is signed to the advertisement.

Referring again to size, there's a little boy in the movies whose salary makes that of many a man look like petty cash.
